

Source:

<https://www.houzz.com/magazine/5-hot-trends-from-torontos-2020-interior-design-show-stsetivw-vs~130876724>

Events | World of Design | For Pros

5 Hot Trends From Toronto's 2020 Interior Design Show

Textured faucets, biophilic wallpaper and sculptural LED lights were among the trends spotted at this year's IDS

Barbara Milner 2 days ago

Houzz Contributor. Designer, journalist and vintage hound. I enjoy telling personal stor... More

Email

Save

Comment | 3

Like | 14

Print

Embed

This year's Interior Design Show in Toronto provided an early look at what we can expect from the world of design in 2020. The show brought together top names — including iconic designer Jonathan Adler — new products, furniture and accessories. Bold color, sculptural LED lighting, biophilic wallpaper, faucets embellished with texture and black-stained wood furniture dominated the showroom floor.

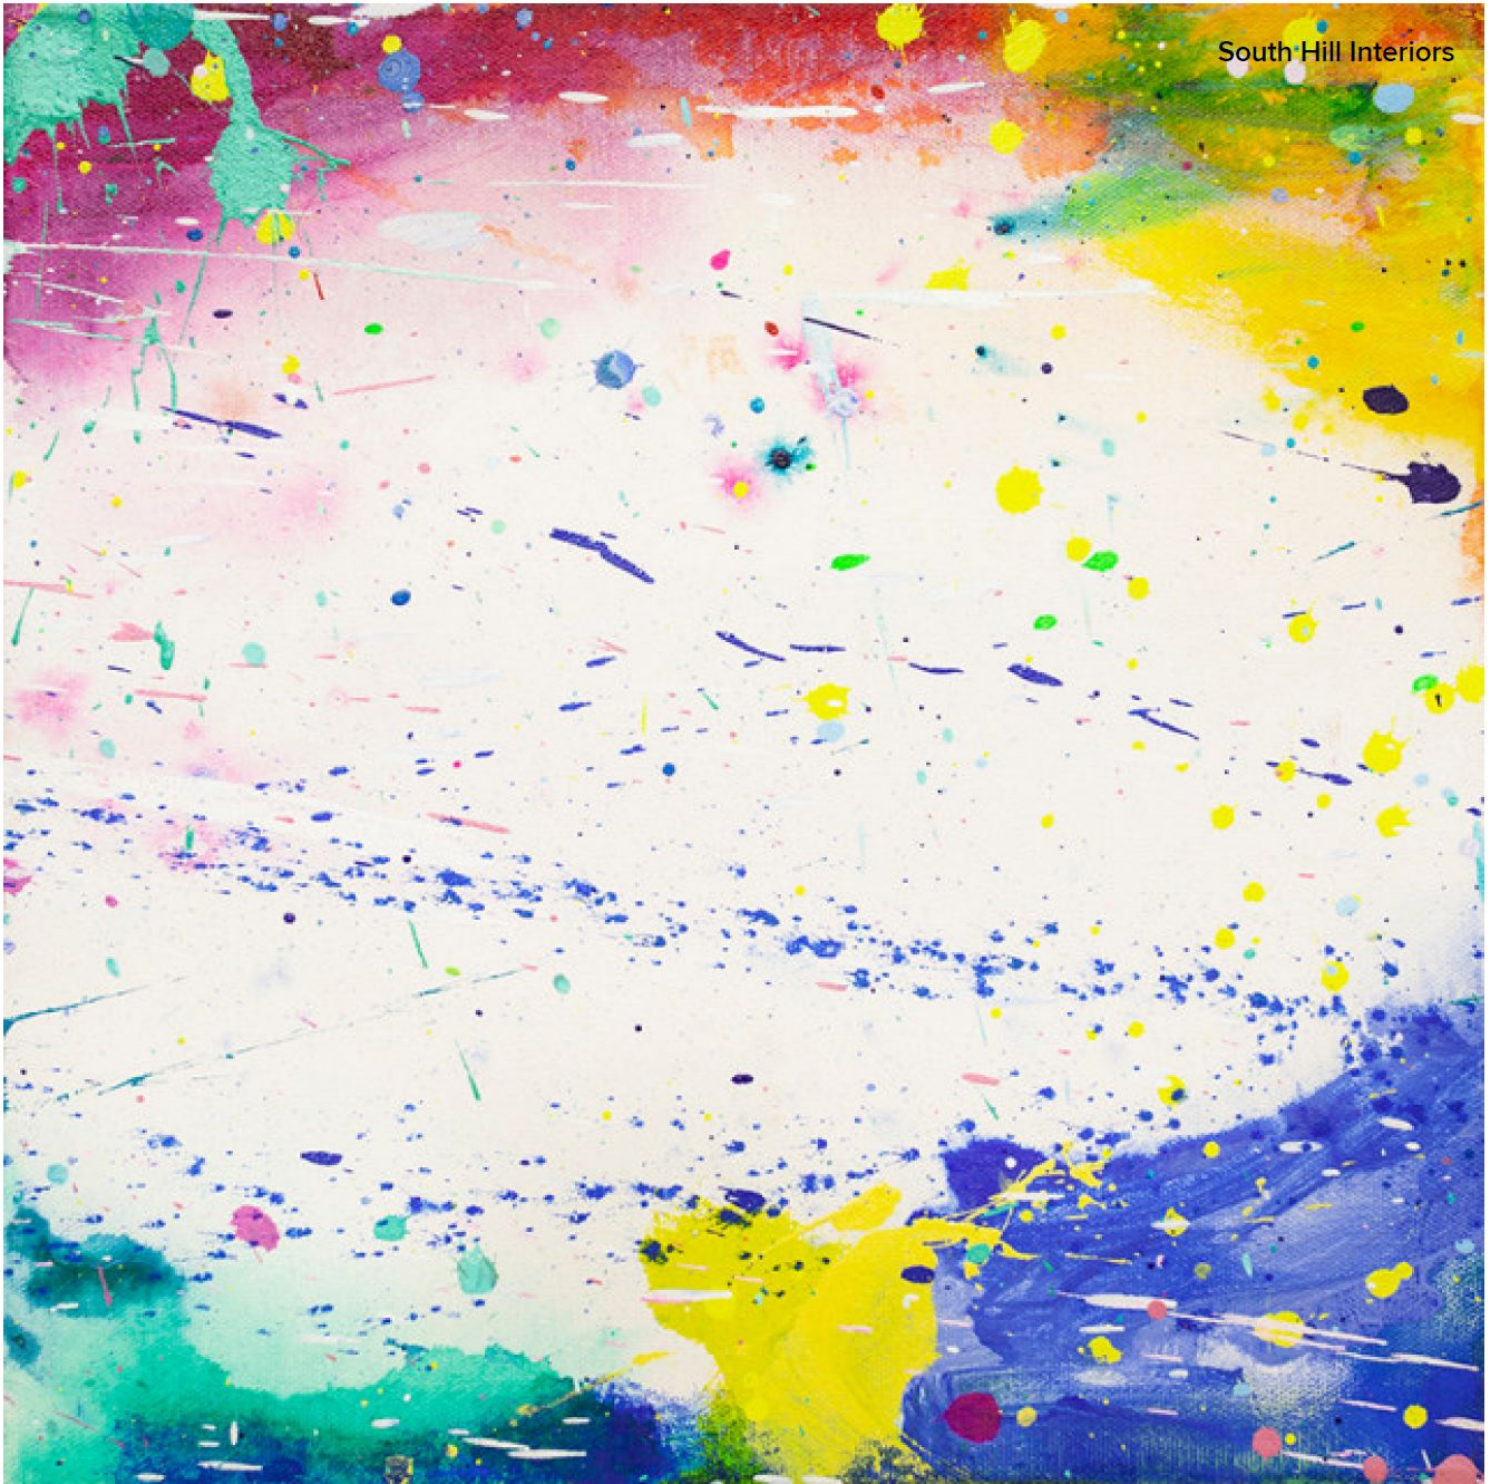

The event, held Jan. 16-19, drew thousands, including architects, interior and industrial designers, homeowners and design enthusiasts. Read on to learn about five emerging trends seen at the show.

W Studio

Pink, blue, red and every color in between were seen in W Studio's new rug collection, a collaboration with world-renowned artist Peter Triantos.

Using digital print technology, W Studio is taking rug making to a new level of art.

W Studio creative director and founder Alan Pourvakil views flooring as the “fifth wall” in a room. His collaboration with Triantos was born out of his love for the artist’s work, which he collects himself, and the desire to introduce bold colors to the company’s rugs. “Color gives us energy and lifts our spirits,” Pourvakil says.

“People are longing for this bolt of positivity and joy in their home. Walking into a room should make you happy.”